Chris,

I specifically addressed what I believe is the issue people seek repentance from me in the section "What is the requirement?". What more must I do?

You respond like "a noisy gong or a clanging cymbal".

Respectfully,

John Kozlowski

John,

You work very hard at not repenting. Please do not contact me anymore.

To extended family and friends,

I am appealing to you for your intervention and asking you to take a moment to be a liaison for me. My wife, Dorothy-Jane Kozlowski, has refused to converse with me for over two years and has now had delivered to me court papers indicating she desires to be divorced from me in the next few days. Since she has indicated that she will delete emails from me unread, I am asking you to contact her directly with my requests below. For those of you that were at our wedding, I especially ask that you take that the role of a witness to our covenant and implore a keeping of that covenant.

I ask no further from you but your prayers.

In all things, my the Lord's mercy show through.

Dorothy-Jane,

I have one statement that I want to make sure you know, and one request that I ask you to follow through on.

I know you know in your heart this to be true. While I confess that I have made life difficult for my family, my love for you, my commitment to you, remains unchanged and has never been violated. Irrespective of what you do, as long as you walk this earth, I will keep my covenant with you and the Lord. You may become a divorced woman in the eyes of the state, but I will remain a married man to you in the eyes of the Lord. You have my heart. You always will.

You have refused have a conversation on the phone with me for over two years now. I ask that before you allow the divorce to transpire you have at least one conversation with me. I ask that you tell me that your love for the Lord, your love for our children, and whatever love you have left for me is insufficient to remain in the covenant of marriage. Please have the courage to say that, preferably to my face, but over the phone at least. If you can say that to my ears and desire no further contact from me, I will respect that. However, you will always be my wife.

Grace is still offered by me to you, irrespective of your circumstances.

I love you,

I love you,

I love you,

John Kozlowski
