Mr. Cross,

I won't repeat what you should have just received, but will add that I remain desirous of reconciliation with you. Please note the number of continuous phone calls I have made to my kids, even without being allowed to speak with them. Do you notice an unwillingness to give up? This is what love does.

Do you also notice that my commitment to my wife has remain unchanged for decades and I continue to declare that? Do you not find that consistent with the commands of the Lord? Do you not find that loving? Do you not find that the right thing to do?

As stated in the other email, it is only my guess, but with a strong suggestion from history, that you are part of, if not the major player, in the attempt to have the state intervene yet again in a matter where they do not belong. Dorothy-Jane should remember that I'm not intimidated easily, as when we had a policeman shown up in body armor requesting to enter our home and I said no. He didn't until he came back with a court order.

You don't have a court order now, and as documented, I don't think it would be wise. Please again consider that your son-in-law, me, is attempting to reconcile with his father-in-law. Please remember that reconciliation precedes the other issues we have, not the other way around. I would be happy to review that in Scripture with you. Please remember that I have offered Scripture after Scripture and remain willing to contend with you on that, which is what the Lord has called us to do (Gen 32, Jud 3). Please don't run from the Scripture, but embrace it and share that joy with me.

Respectfully,

John Kozlowski
