Dorothy-Jane and Mr. Cross,

Again I want to be open with you as I have started a dialog with the author of:

If you read his article you will see a lot of similarities to our situation.

One thing that seems to be present is a hint of anger in some of what I have read in various places. There have been good arguments made that when Jesus used what we would call offensive terms, He used it for religious leadership, and that is as applicable today as 2000 years ago.

However, I am very aware that I am not Christ, and I don't know another's heart. That is why I have been attempting to be more specific when I use the term "coward", as I have with Jim Cross. I can point out cowardice in deeds, but not in the heart as that is the Lord alone who can do that. On that let me remind Jim Cross, your refusal to contend on the Scripture you claim is a cowardly act, and unloving.

There are a lot of crushing things going on in my life right now. I have described to many how I have cut my throat in the corporate world by pointing out how they are using technology to control people. Considering Ephesians 5:11, this is what I must do.

The evidence before me suggests that I do have a long life ahead of me and it will be alone and without reconciliation with institutional church leadership. But then there is the Lord. It is the Lord who I must obey and He makes it clear that my pursuit of reconciliation must continue even when no hope is given. The Lord is my hope and there has been a growing joy in knowing that. However, I often think about what it would be like if one of the three gentlemen I am pursuing reconciles with me. WOW is an understatement. This I will pursue.

Also, Tirzah asked me for photos of my wife today. It was my joy to share them.

I love you!
