Gloria-Jane and Family,

It is difficult for me to think that you have now spent about half of your life without your dad. I have no idea what it has been like for you. Please always keep in mind that I did not leave you, but I was abandoned.

As I was thinking about what to say to you, it seemed obvious to mention Titus 2 as it was part of a fairly extensive recent dialog. I hope you find the video an encouragement and a reminder of who your dad is.

I do interact with some young people, teenage and 20s. There is Trey who I only met once but has been in my prayers since, or Alex who I have met twice and is perhaps a budding relationship. There is Brian who has attempted kindness toward me twice, and Hanna who does the finest work at the juice bar. Then there is Crystal who I not only meet at a store frequently but also met with two others in a library. The others were Mormon Elders and our dialog was fantastic. I have made a conscience effort to be able to lovingly engage others who I don't have a shared foundation with. Of late, two of my best friends are Mormons, Crystal here in Cleveland, and Cory in Utah. All of us know that we disagree on fundamentals, but we engage each other and show care for each other. Cory even checked on me when the tornados hit Nashville. That was a wonderful example of love.

Those that claim Jesus as Lord, as I do, don't seem to have that same ability to love. This is the environment my Gloria-Jane is in. What can her dad, me, do to show you an example of what love is and how a fallen man can strive for obedience to Christ? Perhaps 883 voicemails in an attempt to contact her is a beginning. But what more can I do? Any suggestions?

I hope you see that I haven't given up on reconciling the family. I also hope that you have a similar desire. Lord willing we will together celebrate living the reality of a reconciled family. If we do or if we don't, please always be a blessing to the family and most importantly find your joy in the Lord.

I love you all!
