ErikaLeigh and Family,

I am well aware that this might not get the greatest first impression. The words that are quoted below will not help that. I'm not concerned about first impression. I am concerned about the lasting impression. It is my hope that you will see that there is someone, specifically your dad, who remains in love with you and available to you as long as I have breath.

The video for Jack yesterday was hard to produce. This one was no less. While you see so many you know cower in the institutional church, there remains at least one who, as your words stated, continues to trust in and point to the Lord Jesus Christ and NOT the institutions who use His name but know nothing of love.

Even to those who formerly would boldly proclaim Hebrews 13:4, but failed, should remember that all of Hebrews is true, including 11:6. Please "seek him." The real one, not the fluff one in the institution.

You have a choice to see this video with anger toward me, or ignore it which is likely, but then you could see in it a dad who loves his daughter. You might find the hand that is reaching out to you is not there to slap your hand, but embrace it.

It has become very clear that if you reconcile with fluff, or use "let bygones be bygones", which is more in line with Islam rather than Christianity, reconciliation does not really occur. But if reconciliation is based on truth, which is obviously found in John 14:6, then it can truly be an act of love and enduring. This is offered to you, your siblings, Jim Cross, and most especially your mom.

I love you all!

Wounded by the ones I thought stood by me
Slammed by those I thought loved me
Misunderstood by some
Ignored by most
Speaking the truth, may leave you feeling lonely
But no matter how many people reject you
No matter how many people tell you you're crazy
If you speak the truth of Christ
He is right there next to you
Throughout the trails in this world
Don't be surprise by those who hate you
They hated Jesus first, remember?
But the truth needs to be spoken

No matter what people say
If you're best friend calls you crazy
Don't turn aside from the Lord's path
Only cry out to him who answers prayers
And he will always be with you
With his love and comfort surrounding you
And his words filling your empty soul

So no matter who calls me crazy
No matter what anyone says
If the Lord tells me to speak
Who am I but to obey?
If the Lord tells me to step forward
Who am I so stand still?
If the Lord tells me to fight
Who am I to lay down the sword he has placed in my hand?
