Mr. Cross and Family,

It is 9AM on a Sunday morning and I just finished recording the next video in attempt to start the reconciliation process with my family. Since this is an exposition on Matthew 19 in an attempt to show what the Lord is saying, rather than reading into the text as you have done, it took me a while. So when you have 20 minutes, I recommend watching it. But be aware, unlike the vast majority of Sunday morning services happening today, this is a serious look at the Scripture and not fluff. It is an attempt to be obedient to the Lord and proclaim His word (2Tim4), rather than entertain a crowd or make them feel that they fulfilled a make-believe obligation.

You shredded Matthew 19, which results in hating my wife. This is an effort to show what the Lord states clearly as an act of love toward my wife, and if you finally figure out that those who speak the truth are the ones who love, not those who twist the truth, then you might see love for you in this.

You have been part of ransacking my family and it is time to recover what can be recovered. The way a follower of Christ would do this is to be obedient to the Lord by using the truth, i.e. His word. There again seem to be two options. The ideal is that you and I as brothers in Christ seek to understand from Scripture where we are on the right path and where we are on the wrong path. We would do this with the goal of reconciliation with love at the forefront. The second option is for me to continue to point out your fallacies from Scripture in the hope that at least one of my family will see the grace of the Lord rather than the protection (i.e. enslavement) of the institution. I'm not going to play fair. I am going to use the Scripture. And as long as the Lord gives me breath, I am not going to stop in my attempt at reconciliation because the follower of Christ will endure to the end.

Please join me as my brother!

The render was done, but then I got into a two and a half hour discussion on the Scripture. It was a mutual challenge and on at least one point I realized I had some adjustment to do in my understanding of my trust in the Lord. The objective was not to lower the bar, but to raise it, to become closer to the Lord Jesus Christ in obedience to Him, not finding ways to manipulate Him. It is a marvelous joy to do that with a brother. You and I should do the same.

I love you all!
