Family,

While my effort is toward reconciliation, I have used these means to both encourage and challenge. I hope you find the encouragement in what I have done, and find also encouragement in the challenges. Clearly I will challenge those who don't practice what they preach. But, obviously when silence is offered, I no longer know what others proclaim. I must assume at least some still believe in Christ. But belief ("pistis") is based on trust ("peithō"). Without a real trust your belief is unreal. Trusting in the Lord is seen by doing what He commands, even when it is uncomfortable. If you have seen or read any of what I have done, you know I point to the Lord's command to reconcile. It is very uncomfortable to those who don't trust in the Lord, but rather their belief is in the institution.

But while proclaiming to others, I must remember that I am less than perfect. So what is attached is a description of that.

My pursuit of reconciliation continues unabated.

Please also remember, someone tell my wife I love her!

Fear God and keep his commandments, for this is the whole duty of man.
