Family,

Especially since the events of 2012 I have become more of a student of history with a focus on specific areas, one of which is the time and place where my mom was young. Today it is typically described as those evil people, or the derogatory term, the Nazis. However, it is easy to see how post a difficult period, WWI, and the numerous stresses put on the people of Germany, such as the war reparations, it was easy to gather behind those who would proclaim messages similar to “make Germany great again”. But in order to do that, considering the stresses of the time, the country had to be unified with a common goal and a common enemy. The goal was a restored dominance in the world, a Third Reich. A cause was needed to rally the nation for war, and a series of false flags known as Operation Himmler accomplished that mission. The nation was overwhelmingly unified against a common enemy and giving more power to the state to protect the citizens was easy.

The US has seen many similar events, from “Remember the Maine”, the incubator babies, weapons of mass destruction, and so many more. While rallying a nation for war is good for the bankers, especially when they fund both sides as they often do, the “Military Industrial Complex”, and the power of the state, it is not the only technique. War is against “those people”, but things like global cooling, then global warming, and now climate change, gives a worldwide rallying cry and the need for worldwide institutions to step forward. This is happening with a reasonable degree of success as can be seen in a growing cry for socialism.

But an even stronger technique that has been tried many times over the last many decades is the idea of a pandemic. This gives a common enemy that we can all fear. We will fear only if we heed the call of authority figures rather than look at the evidence. While I point out some of the evidence in the video, the main point is what will this do to my family and my descendants?

In Germany one technique that was used is to encourage everyone to report family and neighbors who were saying or doing things contrary to the national goals. When I was growing up and hearing about this history it was generally described as a bad thing. Today, in China, Israel, some other countries, and the US, there are those government officials encouraging just that. There are websites setup to report on others, programs for your cellphone to make it easy, and then the do-it-yourself method of simply publically shaming those who do not practice “social distancing”.

Then there was the record keeping to monitor all citizens. IBM has a history that they rarely talk about where they developed a lot of the early computer equipment for the purposes of providing the German government a way of electromechanically keeping tabs on their people. It expanded greatly post WWII in East Germany with the Stasi, which had a motto of “know everything about everyone”. For reference, the NSA’s term is “Collect it all. Exploit it all”. Do you see any difference?

Data collection has improved vastly since the time of the Stasi. It has been estimated by Bill Binney, who is an NSA whistleblower, that the Utah Data Center can hold 700Mbytes of data on every person on earth. This is the world my kids are in. Do they think they are free?

Remember the data that is stored about you includes every email you write, every phone call you make, including the audio and text generated by voice to text software, where you were when, which then indicates who you were with, everything done on social media, and so much more via things like your car, LICENSE PLATE READING SOFTWARE, cameras all around, including in space, and the list goes on.

Then there is the outright theft in a massive scale. While it is the obvious one, it isn't the only one, the US Government's generosity of giving everyone a share of a half trillion dollars to make ends meet. Without belaboring the point again, this is simply making my kids debt slaves. The half trillion is to distract everyone from the one and a half trillion that is also being stolen for institutions, plus it is going to be paid back with interest. Actually it will be a perpetual debt for my kids all of their lives.

Part of the objective is to break apart the family, which I have pointed out repeatedly when it was clearly written about in 1848 in the Communist Confession of Faith. The stated goal was to take generations to achieve. Perhaps this generation will see the greatest leap toward that goal. But if you trust in the Lord, and the only institution He instituted, the family, then you should live in that trust.

It comes down to a choice. Do you want to submit to your overlords and live in fear, or do you have a reason to trust in the Lord and be free?

While it is not a shared idea, please let it be known, to anyone in my family, I will not reject you. As I have said for decades, my home is your home, I will not cast you out. I don't offer opulence, but I do offer sanctuary. I'm the husband and the dad, I am also a follower of the Lord Jesus Christ. I can do no other.

I love you all.
